

The restoration of Kingman Island will build upon the ideas generated through the public process. Features requested by the community will be incorporated as best fits with the site, its strengths and limitations. The focus of the project will be to restore, create, and enhance native plant communities and wildlife habitats -- forests, wetlands, and meadows -- while providing educational and recreational opportunities for the public in a manner that is compatible with the natural elements for the island.